○第2部

No. 7 A British researcher wrote a report. It says that children are using electronics more and more.

Some very young children have tablets. They use them over an hour a day. Some older children use their electronics for many hours a week. The researcher says that parents need to make rules. These rules should say when and where they can use their electronics. No one knows how much time is OK for children, but they should not use them for very long.
